

CORNER STONE OF NEW GRANGE HALL LAID BY SOCIETY

Impressive Ceremonies Are Conducted Sunday by Greenville Farmers

With impressive ritualistic ceremonies, the South Greenville Grange laid the corner stone of the new grange hall Sunday afternoon, in the presence of a large assemblage of visitors.

The ceremonies were held on the first floor, the walls of which are completed. The program opened with the formation of a line of march in the farm yard of Walter Pingle. In the line were 190 members of the senior and juvenile granges. The order of formation was the standard bearers, band, officers of the grange, members of the grange, officers of the juvenile grange, and visiting members. To the music of the band, the march was made from the place of formation to the new building where the balance of the program was conducted.

Each officer of the grange had a part to perform in the ceremonies that had a special significance and presented a valuable lesson. The officers were assisted by Herman Ihde, master of the State Grange. Vocal music was furnished by members of both granges. George R. Schaefer, master of the grange, presided at the ceremonies. The speakers were Mr. Schaefer, Mr. Ihde, and Norton Williams, vice president of the E. P. U. Neenah. In the crypt of the corner stone were placed the constitution and digest of the National Grange, ceremony of laying the corner stone, song book, constitution of the State Grange, register of granges in the state, grange paper, by-laws of subordinate granges, historical sketch of the grange organization, names of present membership, offerings of Ceres, samples of various grains, offerings of Flora, flowers, offering of Pomona, fruits and fruit products. Declaration of purposes, list of building committees, names of grange officers, names of members of the juvenile grange, and officers of juvenile grange. Bessie Reinders took the part of Ceres, Mrs. Ida Westphal, Pomona, Viola Jahnke, Flora, and the lady assistant steward was Mrs. Georgina Larson. The organist was Mrs. Ross Schaefer.

TRACES LONG HISTORY
“In planning to put up this new building, the membership of the South Greenville Grange was under taking the impossible, but ‘Where there is a will, there is a way,’ said George R. Schaefer, master of the South Greenville Grange. ‘The new concrete highway had taken a large part of the lot on which the old grange hall stood. We considered moving the old hall to another site. We might have done that but the old building was not supplying the needs of the growing membership. The other alternative was the erection of a new, modern hall. We finally decided on the building program.’”

Turning to the history of the South Greenville Grange, Mr. Schaefer said: “The South Greenville Grange was organized Oct. 27, 1873, at a time when the Grange spirit was at its height. Over 500 granges were organized during the two years 1872 and 1873 but history proves that the average life of a farm organization is about two years. All the 500 granges organized in those two years mentioned are dead except the South Greenville.”

The South Greenville Grange was organized in a log hall known as Congress Hall, build during the Civil War by an organization of German settlers, many of whom became charter members of the grange.

John L. Pingle was the first master of the South Greenville Grange, and William Perry was the first secretary. Mrs. Sophie Kapingst has the honor of being the only living charter member of the South Greenville Grange. She is still attending grange meetings. At this point in his talk, Mr. Schaefer invited Mrs. Kapingst, who was in the group to stand. She accepted the invitation and was warmly applauded.

Mr. Ihde gave the purpose of publically laying the corner stones of certain classes of buildings and said that the practice was as old as civilization itself and could be traced to the most remote antiquity. At the close of the ceremonies he declared the corner stone of the new South Greenville Grange hall duly laid and “May the Architect of the Universe make this building habitable as long as Time shall last,” was his citation.

MEMBERS HELP IN WORK
The members of the building committee are: George R. Schaefer, Fred Schuk, Charles Schroeder, Chris. Kapingst, Mrs. Nellie Schaefer, Mrs. Tina Wismer, Mrs. Helen Menning, Louis Haas, Harvey Jamison, and Hans Anderson. Albert Haase, Appleton, is doing the carpenter work and Adam Lippert, Appleton, the mason work. Members of the grange did the excavating, poured the cement and are hauling the tile and brick out of which the building is being constructed.

The hall is being built of tile, faced with pressed brick. It is one story above a high basement. Its dimensions are 42 feet by 92 feet. On the ground floor will be a store, ticket office, cloak rooms, two rest rooms, Juniors' room and kitchen. The main hall on the upper floor will be 40 feet by 60 feet, provided with a stage and an equipment room.

Excavating for the new building was started Aug. 1, the basement was completed on Sept. 8, and the entire building operations will probably be completed by the middle of November. The estimated cost of the structure is $20,000.

When the building is completed, it will be a model of beauty and usefulness, that will surpass any building of the kind in rural districts of the state, and compare favorably with the best lodge buildings in the cities.

The present officers of the South Greenville Grange are: George R. Schaefer, master; Wallace Pingle, overseer; Ray Hart, steward; Harold Miller, assistant steward; Mrs. Helen Menning, lecturer; Robert Schroeder, chaplain; Ruth Schaefer, secretary; Mito Anderson, treasurer; and John Pingle, gate keeper.

Texas Guinan's Record Nothing Beside This One

Milwaukee—(P)—Miss Ruth Elizabeth O'Brien as a hostess has probably entertained as many people as Texas Guinan, and never once has had to ask her “company” to “give the little girl a hand.”

Texas, famous New York night club hostess, in case you don't read the papers often, is in fact a piker compared to Miss O'Brien. “Tex” sticks to her own little night club, or at least to the night life of the metropolis, while Milwaukee's most important paid hostess goes in for hostessing in almost every establishment where persons might gather for amusement or recreation.

A mere night club? Pooh Pooh! Could Tex show them through a factory and “put it over with the suckers?” Maybe she could, but she doesn't and Miss O'Brien does.

Miss O'Brien occupies the novel position of hostess for the convention department of the Milwaukee association of Commerce.

She takes the women convention visitors to a hosiery factory where they are escorted through and given a pair of silk stockings; to a brewery where they have beer and lunch; to a candy factory where they are given a box of candy; to an ice cream plant where they have ice cream and cake; to a department store where they have luncheon; to another store where each is given a rosebud.

Sightseeing tours, theater parties, educational trips, card sessions, hotel arrangements, luncheons—just think of anything that a gracious and resourceful hostess might do for her guests, and you have mapped out a day's work for Miss O'Brien.

When she isn't being Milwaukee's “so glad you came” lady, Miss O'Brien bosses a crew of cheerful and competent young women who rally at the convention headquarters and take care of all registration duties that are otherwise a heavy burden on the pleasure-bent convention secretary.

The conventioners like it—love it in fact. One secretary of a convention that recently was held here, wrote in glowing terms of the reception given by Milwaukee, and especially like demonstration of hospitality which was shown through Miss O'Brien's work. Other commendatory letters have been received.

2 More Fall In Gang War In Chicago

Wounded Man Dies—Sicilian Leader Shot Down in Another Murder

Chicago—(P)—Two more men were dead of gang bullets in Chicago Monday and elaborate plans were being made for the funeral of a third. Joe Ferraro, who was shot down in a crowded Madison-st during the peak of Friday afternoon traffic by the same “mob” whose bullets slew Tony Lombardo, died Sunday of his wounds. Lombardo's death had been instantaneous, a shot rilling through the head. Ferraro, a bodyguard for Lombardo, was wounded in the back. Paralysis set in, causing his death.

Almost at the same time that Ferraro died, police came upon the body of Cobb Eskelson, 35, who had been shot as he walked along Larabee-st, near the north side Sicilian colony. The motive behind Eskelson's death was not clear to police, but they were convinced that it had some connection with the slaying of Lombardo and the fatal wounding of Ferraro.

LEADER OF SICILIANS
Lombardo, they emphasized, was a power among the Sicilians. The fact that Eskelson had been shot down in a neighborhood in which Lombardo had been active, they said, was significant. A star designating Eskelson as “assistant prosecuting attorney, Chicago,” was found in his clothing, but police quickly ascertained that Eskelson was unknown to the prosecutor's office. They advanced the theory that he had used the star to extort money from manufacturers and dealers in alcohol—two lines of law breaking in which they said Lombardo was prominently linked.

No new arrests have been made in the Lombardo-Ferraro slayings. Police were holding Joe Lolordo, who was seized as he ran through the crowded loop Friday afternoon a moment after Ferraro had been shot down. Lolordo has insisted that he, as well as Ferraro, was acting as bodyguard for Lombardo, and that when arrested he was chasing one of the slayers.

LETTER GOLF

FORE! HAM AND!
You can't go from HAM to eggs in letter golf, but if you aren't too hungry and can be content with one EGG, it makes a nice par seven. One solution, which you may be able to beat, is on page 9.

TEACH HISTORY BY MOTION PICTURES

High School Students See First of Yale University Historical Series

The first motion picture of the Yale University series of films on American History, called Chronicles of America, was shown at the Appleton high school during the Monday assembly period.

The film dealt with the life of Columbus, his attempt at the Spanish court to gain sanction of his trip to the Indies and his trip to America.

The showing of the film, which was in correlation with the work in the American history department, was under the direction of Miss Blanche McCarthy of the American history department.

The series of pictures, which is obtained through the University of Wisconsin extension department, will cost $385.00. Voluntary contributions from the pupils and teachers will be depended upon to defray expenses. The series consists of 13 different showings, one of which will be given every two weeks.

The second annual outing of parents and teachers, under auspices of the Citizens committee appointed by the attendance board, was held Saturday afternoon and evening at Onaway Island, Waukegan. Thirty-one automobiles left the high school at 1:30 bearing 155 teachers and wives of faculty members. Upon reaching the island, a program of games and stunts, in charge of a committee of teachers, was conducted, following by a dinner served by Mrs. M. K. Dick and corps of assistants.

The cost of the outing was divided among the citizens and parents in attendance. Opportunity for acquaintance and assurance of welcome particularly to those who have recently taken positions in the city school system, were the objectives of the affair.

The committee had intended to issue a general invitation to parents but the camp facilities on the island are limited to 125, so this idea was abandoned until such provisions can be made to entertain a larger delegation.

GERMAN REPUBLIC OVERCOMES FINAL STRIP OF EMPIRE

Berlin—(P)—Democracy has defeated monarchy in its last German stronghold, Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, the cradle of the former imperial house. It has taken ten years for the realization to penetrate this feudal Prussian domain that there is no room in Republican Germany for kings, dukes and princes. Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen is in southern Wurtemberg where a branch of the ex-Kaisers family has ruled patriarchally over a territory one-third the size of Rhode Island since the early part of the 13th century. Representatives of the federal government appointed since the advent of the republic, have not had smooth sailing. Prince William of Hohenzollern, burgrave of Nuremberg, count of Sigmaringen, as his abbreviated title went, gave the marble countenance to the republican "Regierungs-Präsident" who was "cut" by all that counted as "society" in the center of diarch conservatism.

POPE'S SECRETARY TO RESIGN TO WRITE HISTORY OF BISHOPS

Rome—(P)—Reports that Cardinal Gasparri, the 76-year-old papal secretary, would resign in October to write a history of the Roman bishops has raised the question of how Pope Pius XI will get along without the services of his gayest and most optimistic adviser. Added to his official duties Cardinal Gasparri has been guardian of the pope's cheerful mood and the belief is fairly general that the Vatican might be a dull place without him.

Medics Say Improper Foods Is Cause Of Decaying Teeth

Madison—Decaying teeth among children are more often caused by a improper diet than in any other way, just as obesity may be caused by eating the wrong things. This fact has been discovered from a series of recent investigations which have been conducted upon children, who have been suffering with diabetes. As soon as the diet was improved, the decaying of their teeth stopped.

The educational committee of the State Medical society in a bulletin today reviewing the discoveries from these investigations announced that the feeding of a complete diet was found to be the secret of the recovery of sound teeth by these children.

"Of course where the teeth are decayed, the improvement of the diet did not cause new tooth structure to be formed," declares the Society's bulletin in announcing the results of these investigations. "The striking fact was that the decaying stopped suddenly when the diet was properly regulated."

"It is not necessary to have diabetes in order to have a diet that will cause sound teeth to grow. No startling new principles were used in planning such diets. These children and their parents realized that life and health depended on accurately following the doctor's diet prescription. This diet is really very simple. It can be summarized by saying meat or egg once daily, some green colored vegetables each day, a portion of fresh fruit at least once in the day, and a pint to a quart of whole milk. This is merely a repetition of the essentials for a diet for any healthy person. Only people who are dieting under doctor's orders ought ever to eat any other type of a diet than this. Far from being monotonous, such a diet is as varied as one could wish."

"Many readers will notice at once that no mention is made of the use of hard foods to be chewed, or the avoidance of sweets. Of course, diabetic children, like adults with this trouble, are not allowed to have sweetened foods. The harm that sugar in excess does to teeth is probably not so much because it ferments in the mouth as because it stops hunger so quickly. If appetite is satisfied by sweet things, there is no reason why most of us would eat the vegetables and fruits. These latter foods furnish lime salts without which teeth cannot be made. Calcium, the basis of lime, is also obtained in generous amount in milk. This is one of the most important reasons for insisting on milk for every child."

"Another important constituent of teeth is phosphorus. This is found also in milk, and likewise in meat and eggs. This phosphorus is necessary for all kinds of living things, and our bodies require a continuous supply, for building teeth and bones, for good digestion, for strong muscles, and for the defense against the invasion of germs."

"It is most difficult to plan a diet which will furnish good amounts of calcium and phosphorus, but which will allow the teeth to become soft and decay. Unless the food contains sufficient supplies of the vitamins, the body cannot use the good materials to advantage. It has been known for several years that with-out a certain vitamin, secured particularly from fresh fruits and vegetables, the teeth become loose, the gums bleed, and scurvy occurs."

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell is Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In proper dose, given in the direction of use, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. A drug store has the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin means to you and yours. MILITARY MOTIVES INSPIRE AGITATION FOR NEW WATERWAY

Nicaraguan Canal Proposed to Augment Service of Panama Passageway

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—Proposals for a Nicaraguan canal to be started in the next few years probably are inspired more by military than by commercial motives.

There is no indication that the Panama Canal is fast approaching its maximum carrying capacity. That time is likely not to come before the year 2000, if ever, although the matter is conjectural.

The canal now handles about 45 per cent of its present minimum capacity. If and when a third set of locks is built, as was contemplated in the original plans for the ditch, it will be able to take care of more than four times as many ships as are now using it.

Tonnage passing through the canal has shown a steady growth in the last few years, but a saturation point may be reached easily within the next few years. One estimate has been made that the capacity of the canal as it is would not be reached until about 1950—and if a third set of locks were constructed meanwhile that capacity would be doubled.

Officials of the canal, who cite these facts, do not understand the persistent agitation for a canal through Nicaragua.

The most seaworthy argument in favor of a second canal, however, is made from the standpoint of military strategy and the national defense. It is held that in event of war against the United States the canal might easily be put out of commission, with disastrous possibilities for our navy. Hence, wouldn't it be much safer to have a second canal to fall back on in an emergency?

It will doubtless occur to the reader that if the Panama Canal can be blown up or bottled up, the same thing might be done to any Nicaraguan canal. Nevertheless, the argument is that two canals are better than one and that in the unlikely event that an earthquake should some time destroy one, the other in all probability would be left intact.

It is not difficult to demonstrate that if, in war or peace, there is danger to the present canal, a second canal which would guarantee a canal in perpetuity, come what might, would be worth the cost. The cost of a Nicaraguan canal, incidentally, is estimated as high as a billion dollars.

In 1927, 5475 ships went through the Panama Canal. This was the peak, but it was only 245 more than in 1924, and since 1914 four years have shown fewer transits than the year preceding.

In the last session of Congress, a resolution was introduced directing the chief of army engineers to study both the Nicaraguan canal route and the enlargement of the Panama Canal by another set of locks. The resolution was lost in the shuffle.

Meanwhile, the officials of the Panama Canal are confining themselves to their next big task, which is not concerned with enlargement or new canals. This is the building of the Alhajuela dam in the Chagres river which will hold back 22,000,000,000 cubic feet of water for use in an emergency. An abnormally dry season might cause a water shortage. The new dam will contain the necessary water in that case.

Surveys are now in progress and the dam probably won't be finished for another four or five years. It will be 170 feet high, lodged between high cliffs. Its basin will cover 22 square miles, running outside the 10-mile stretch of the Canal Zone, which runs through the Republic of Panama. As was the enlargement of the canal, this dam was provided for in the original plans.

CHILDREN LIKE AVIATION BOOKS

Works by Lindbergh and Byrd Met With Favor at Public Library

"We" by Lindbergh, "Skyward," by Richard Byrd, and Scott's "Stamp Catalogue" were the most popular non-fiction books with readers in the children's room of the Appleton public library during the summer.

Fiction dealing with experiences of young girls is most popular with girl readers. "Anne of Green Gables" by Montgomery, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" by Wiggin, "Abbie Ann" by Martin, and Stuart's "Babette" were some of the summer's incessant circulators.

"Gold Cache," "Lone Wolf's Mistake," "Running Eagle," and "Son of the Navahos," Indian stories by G. W. Schultz were some of the most potent reasons why small boys lined three deep before the library's desk. Grinnell's "Jack in the Rockies," "Jack, the Young Ranchman," and Jack in a score of other guises was also a popular circulator.

The first week of school is the least busy of the year in the library. After the children become adjusted to school, however, the library rush, the heaviest 17-week hours after school in the afternoon and before supper, begins. The children's room is increasingly busy as the school months continue. The largest circulation is during the months of March and April.

It will doubtless occur to the reader that if the Panama Canal can be blown up or bottled up, the same thing might be done to any Nicaraguan canal. Nevertheless, the argument is that two canals are better than one and that in the unlikely event that an earthquake should some time destroy one, the other in all probability would be left intact.

Gosh! Maybe There Will Be Another Notification

Madison—(P)—Mr. Brown doesn't know who is running for president on the Republican ticket.

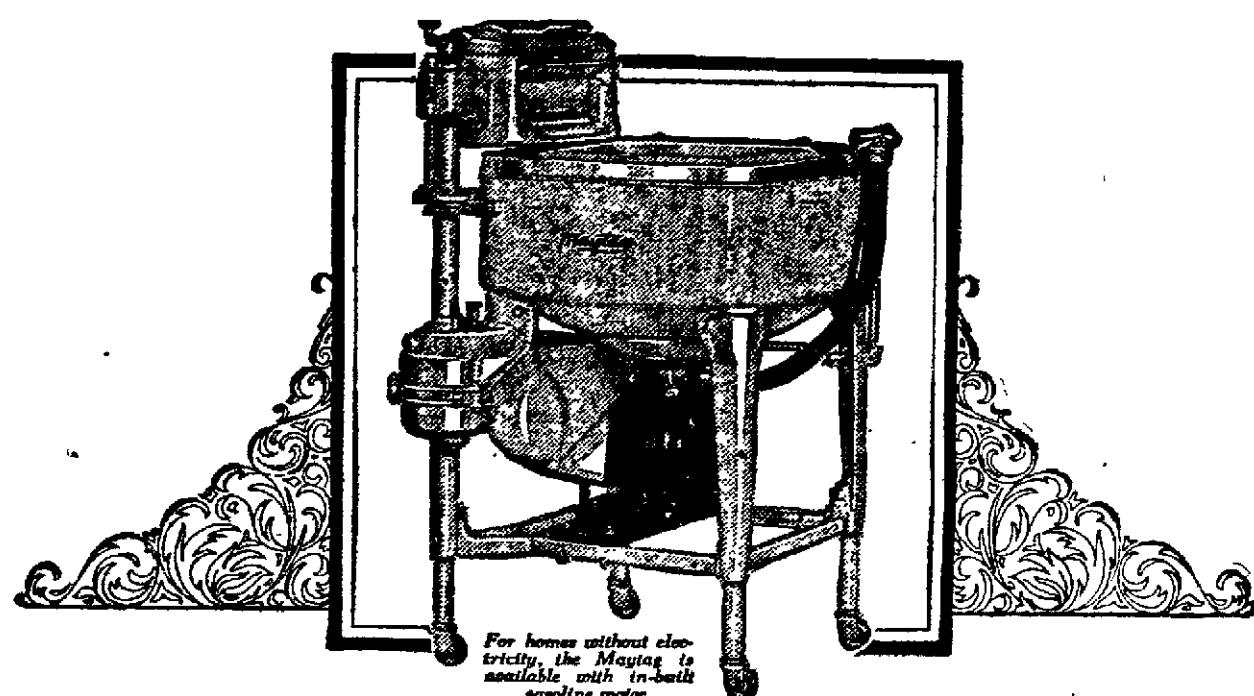

Which is really a bit distressing to both Mr. Brown and to the Republican party. For Mr. Brown—George Brown—is the member of the secretary of state's staff who puts names on the ballots which voters mark next November. And unless he ascertains between now and election day who is the Republican selected at Kansas City, that party will be handicapped in polling much of a vote in Wisconsin.

Not that Mr. Brown is entirely lacking in knowledge on the subject. He has heard, and has read in the newspapers, that Herbert Hoover is the man. And, personally, he has no doubt that Hoover was nominated with due and proper procedure.

But officially he has received not the slightest intimation that the Republicans have chosen anyone at all. And until the national committee, or the state committee, or some other organization which can speak with authority lets him in on the open secret, Mr. Hoover's name will not go on Wisconsin ballots.

Mr. Brown is not actually perturbed about the situation. Fifteen years of experience in handling elections have taught him that people running for office usually comply with

ONE year ago, I announced the New Maytag as our latest and greatest achievement. Noteworthy refinements and striking improvements, including a new method of soap and water removal, were incorporated in the new washer. It set standards of convenience and washing efficiency that had never been known before.

During the year that has passed, hundreds of thousands of NEW Maytags have been introduced into as many homes, and each time subject to the famous Maytag trial basis: "If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it." Rigorous, exacting washday tests assailed the New Maytag, and it has emerged victorious to a degree exceeding my highest expectations.

A year ago, the New Maytag enjoyed a prestige inherited from Maytags of the past. Today the New Maytag enjoys a prestige in its own right, won by demonstrated performance. It has advanced still farther in its world leadership.

RUSSIA ACCEPTS TREATY

Russia has given her formal adhesion to the Briand-Kellogg treaty outlawing war. She has not done it with very good grace, but she has done it. She points out to the United States and other governments that failure to resume "normal pacific relations" with a nation like Russia creates a dangerous atmosphere. She intimates to Great Britain that the latter's reservation of free action in several unnamed territories is unacceptable. She makes another hypocritical gesture in favor of "universal and full disarmament." The soviet is forced to keep a large standing army in order to maintain itself in power. It could not exercise its absolutism and tyranny over the Russian people a day without a powerful and ruthless military. Therefore the soviet has no real thought of total disarmament. The Russian disarmament bluff can easily be made because the bolsheviks know it will not be called.

It is characteristic of Russia to endeavor to use her acceptance of the Kellogg treaty as a means to gaining recognition by the United States, which of course will not be given on this pretense. Russia must prove by act and policy that her government is fit to associate with the nations before Washington will resume relations with her. Nevertheless, her adhesion to the Kellogg treaty is highly desirable. It will ally considerably the apprehensions of her border neighbors and will stimulate tendencies toward peace and feelings of security throughout Europe. One other good result may follow. Russia's participation in the agreement renouncing war and her association with the powers in this great moral undertaking may cause her to abandon revolutionary propaganda in other countries and behave according to her international obligations.

A BIT OF COMMON SENSE

William J. Bogan, Chicago's superintendent of schools, seems to be a man of considerable common sense.

The stockingless fad, so popular among girls these days, has gone over big with Chicago's younger generation, and it occurred to someone to wonder if the school authorities would allow girls to go to school minus their hose. So the question was put to Mr. Bogan.

"If mothers want their girls to go stockingless, it's none of my business and none of the teacher's," he replied.

His action, somehow, is extremely refreshing, considering some of the school authorities who have felt themselves called on to regulate the pupil's garb in all its details.

BOOTLEG "RESIDENCES"

Prohibition agents find that bootleggers are equipping their places of business with second hand furniture—beds, stoves, dishes, etc., in order to make them technically residences. The bootleggers then plead the exemption from search and seizure allowed by law to a bona fide dwelling.

Sometimes a complete outfit of furniture is moved from a place that has just been closed by law to a new one, to hold forth in the latter until that, too, is closed. No old shack or barn is too dilapidated to blossom forth as a dwelling without dwellers.

This development might have been expected. Since offices and other public places may be searched without a warrant, while a home may be entered only on a warrant citing conclusive evidence that sales have been made there, it is natural that many an office should be metamorphosed into a seeming home.

It's a great game between the bootleggers and the enforcement officers. This latest trick emphasizes again the fact that enforcement depends ultimately on the will of the consumers of bootleg stuff. Only when a major portion of the public decides not to drink illicit liquor will the bootlegger hunt a different job.

WORLD ARMAMENT

A recent analysis of world armament shows that it is really smaller than it was before the war. European standing armies in 1914 numbered 4,500,000 men. Today they number only 3,000,000. This reduction, however, is due almost entirely to the forced disarmament of Germany and Austria and voluntary limitation of the Russian army. The allied nations have just about as many men in the field as they had before they "made the world safe for democracy." Such reduction as they have made is mostly credited to France—a fact that Americans have not realized.

Military expenditures, reckoned in percentage of total budget, have gone down. France has cut the military item from its pre-war figure of 35 per cent to 16 per cent of her total expenditure; Britain from 39 per cent to 14 per cent; Italy from 31 per cent to 18 per cent. But this does not mean an actual reduction in money cost. The total expended for armament is larger than before the war, because the smaller percentage applies to a far greater total expenditure. Appropriations in pounds, francs, etc., have increased.

Why this should be so in a time of world-wide peace, with no threat of war that an ordinarily intelligent person can see anywhere on the horizon, is hard to understand. It is, moreover, a standing reproach to a generation professing a desire for peace. "Today," as the New York Times observes, "the inflated armament reads like negation of an ideal everywhere subscribed to. Big armies inevitably raise doubts concerning the sincerity of the governments or the degree to which they have really emancipated themselves from the old fears and hatreds. The burden of armament today is not the money cost but the moral cost."

BIG BUSINESS TODAY

The United States Steel corporation, an industrial giant when it was created, would seem a dwarf if it had the same dimensions now. It was capitalized at less than a billion dollars. Even so, it was a Colossus, towering over all the other industries, even Standard Oil. But today there are eight American corporations with invested capital of more than a billion apiece. Consolidations now in progress will add three or four within a year.

Old notions of economic size have lost their application since the war. Big business today is many times as big as it was fifteen years ago. Yet strangely enough, no popular fear of it is felt, as was the case before the war. The greater business grows, the less fear it seems to inspire. Two obvious reasons explain that: Business is better behaved than it was in the old days, and people understand business better. Business behaves itself better because it pays to be square, and people understand business better, because they participate as investors and profit-sharers.

Big business owned and controlled by a few men was one thing; big business owned and controlled by millions of people is quite another thing.

OUR LESSON IN FORESTS

An outstanding example of the value of conservation is shown today in the national forests of the United States. And but for the Act of 1891, granting the president the right to set aside such forests, the threatened exhaustion of our lumber supply would be almost at hand.

There are now more than 300,000 square miles of national forests, providing watershed protection, timber and game. The various states have added to their own forest holdings until today more than 10,000,000 acres are so administered.

In addition to protecting the trees from fire and depredation, the United States Forest Service now supervises, grazing and lumbering privileges, conducts experiments, plants and cooperates in productive methods and elimination of waste.

The forests have taught us a wonderful lesson in conservation.

A woman can dress now in fifty seconds, says a New York style dictator. Does it take that long?

"Henry Ford Tells Belief in Supernatural Forces," says a headline. He doesn't need to tell us that; we still see some of the old Model T's running around the streets.

A man owes a lot to his wife, with a house on it.

Judging by some of the building jobs we have seen lately, the bricklayers spend their off days watching chess matches.

PROGRESS IN MINOR SURGERY

A policy or practice that has been imposed upon me by years of experience is this: I must never send anybody bad news. Rather than do so, I'll ignore a question or tell a lie—that is, evade or honest answer by saying I do not know or I am unable to form an opinion. Coupled with this policy, or rather covered by it, is the determination to give no morbid information, or at least to give none promiscuously. Of course this policy is a flexible one and it never stands in the way when I believe I can do any good by sending bad news or by furnishing morbid information. However, I am sole judge about that.

Here is a communication from an anxious mother, and it affords me an opportunity to publish some good news—or at least to give some information which should be good news to this particular mother and to many who share her ideas. She writes:

"A week ago Saturday my little girl 4 years old, was hit with a machine and broke her leg and smashed her face. The doctor had to put her leg in a plaster of Paris cast, and Monday he came and took it out of the cast and examined it and squeezed it and pulled it and put it back in the cast. Saturday morning he came and did the same thing. What I would like to know is whether that is proper treatment. I always thought the leg had to be left in the cast once it was put in till it was all healed. Please let me know as soon as possible because he said he would come back later in the week and repeat this treatment."

It may have been the practice in old times to put a broken leg in splints or a cast and leave it undisturbed for several weeks. The old time doctors fancied that the main purpose of splints or plaster cast was to provide a substitute rigidity to take the place of the broken bone. Modern surgery, however, deals differently with such conditions. Nowadays the splint or cast is used merely as a support for the muscles and other soft tissues, just as dressings, bandages or other supports are used for various wounds. The purpose of the splint or cast is to provide rest, which favors the healing process.

But the broken bones treated in the old fashioned way, that is, by prolonged immobility in splints or casts, had an unfortunate way of healing in an unsatisfactory way, so that prolonged or even permanent functional impairment followed the injury. Modern surgery strives to forestall this, and I believe the doctor in the case is giving the little patient the best possible treatment. Evidently he practices the modern method. It is generally best to remove a broken limb from splints or cast or other fixed dressing and carefully massage and manipulate it a little every day or two after the first few days. Of course the doctor's knowledge and judgment guide him in doing this. Such practice, besides assuring more satisfactory outcome of the injury, gives the patient greater comfort throughout the course of confinement.

I know the older doctors used to apply splints and the "bind them on with bandages that were in many cases uncomfortably tight and sometimes harmfully tight. They meant well, but their knowledge of the pathology was inadequate. The modern surgeon has discarded all such crude methods.

Popular notions about the casts are mostly based on old time methods. Plaster of Paris splints or casts are often the most comfortable form of dressing available. There is no torture, no ordeal, about wearing such a dressing, though the confinement necessarily has its annoyance.

Laymen do well to lay aside their preconceived notions about the treatment of broken bones, when this emergency occurs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Why the Alias?

Would you advise me to go to the (let us say Hickville) Research Laboratories, Inc., for a health examination. They offer... (Miss E. M. F.)

Answer—No. I advise you to give all "laboratories," "institutes," "clinics" or other impersonal establishments a wide berth and go to a reputable physician who practices under his own name.

Tonsillitis Time

My daughter aged 13 months has her tonsils removed. Some say spring is the best time to have it done. Do you agree with that? (Mrs. W. R.)

Answer—Now is the best time to have it done. Before spring winds around your daughter may suffer serious effects from the neglected condition.

A SWAN SONG FOR GALSWORD

THY

Even when he is his second best, Galsworthy is still so good that he is not to be classed with the average run of novelists. It is well to keep this in mind in considering "Swan Song," the last of the Forsyte series. It is very much worth reading even though it is not by any means Galsworthy at his best.

The title is symbolical, of course, but I wonder while reading the book if it was not symbolical in a way not intended by the author. Was it a Galsworthy swan song as well as a swan song for the Forsyte family? All lovers of Galsworthy will hope not. He ought to find a new theme into which he can pour himself with all the energy that he has often shown.

"Swan Song" gives the impression of flagging inspiration on Galsworthy's part. Perhaps he has been with the Forsyte family too long. It has seemed to me that the last three novels of the series—"The White Monkey," "The Silver Spoon," and "Swan Song"—are lacking in that sureness of touch that marked the "Forsyte Saga" up to that point. "Swan Song" seems to me not a grand climax but merely a continuation after inspiration has been exhausted or nearly exhausted.

A single exception should be made. Whenever Soames Forsyte wanders into the story all sense of strain and effort disappears. Galsworthy is so completely in the skin of Soames that he never makes a mistake. What Soames says and does is inevitable almost to the slightest detail. You get the impression that he would have said just that and would have done just that.

There is no never any sense of Galsworthy intervening between his character and his reader. Soames is alive to his very finger tips and he stays very much alive until the last breath in out of his body. The death of Soames is as good as anything in the whole Forsyte Saga and his trip back to the place where the Forsyte family originated, just before his death, is infused with a sense of reality, a sense of life, that constitutes its great fiction.

Soames comes into the story from time to time, in little episodes and scenes, and when he does Galsworthy almost never strikes a wrong note. The lawyer and connoisseur is there, alive and true—all his shrewdness, all his awareness, all his skepticism, all his sense of beauty, his sensitiveness.

"LOVE FOR TWO"

by Ruth Dewey Groves

1928 By N. E. A. Service, Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding to RODNEY BRYER, feels troubled at receiving a dagger-like paper knife from LILA MARSH, an ex-sweetheart of Rod's. She resolves not to be jealous, but a second blow to her pride comes when she accidentally overhears one of her bridesmaids ask another if she thought the bride liked being second choice.

The pain in her heart vanishes when Rod whispers "My wife" with a world of adoration in his eyes. They spend an ideal honeymoon and Bertie Lou forgets about Lila until they return and find her playing dictator in their apartment because she "knows what Rod likes."

They settle down in the little home but too much hospitality upsets their financial budget. This worries Bertie Lou, as does the persistent annoyance of Lila. So she is happy when Rod accepts a position in New York which has been offered him by TOM FRASER.

Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. The cost of things amazes them and Bertie Lou is embarrassed when MOLLY FRASER takes her to an exclusive gown shop and urges her to buy more clothes than she can afford. She is also worried at Rod's playing poker with Tom. One night after winning some high stakes, Rod foolishly invites the crowd to a night club. Bertie Lou opens a charge account against Rod's wishes in order to get a new evening dress before the party. For Molly has announced that Lila will arrive in time for the affair.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIV

Molly suggested taking two cabs to the club. "There's no sense getting crushed." She was thinking of her new ermine coat.

"Let's," Lila agreed, and while they waited she found an opportunity for a whispered word to her hostess.

When the first cab drew up to the curb Molly motioned Bertie Lou to get in. "You first," Bertie Lou said, stepping aside. Molly laughed and took her by the arm. To resist would have shown that Bertie Lou knew what Lila was engineering. She preferred to have them think she hadn't caught on.

Molly climbed in after her and while Rod was engaged in signaling a second cab Molly called to Tom to come and join her. Tom delayed until the other cab came to a stop, and Lila turned toward it. Then he got in with Molly and Bertie Lou. He was perfectly innocent. It seemed a natural thing to do.

The distance to the club was short, but heavy traffic delayed them. When finally the two cabs arrived before the unpretentious entrance of the Arabesque Lila had enjoyed her "moment" with Rod. At least she gave the impression of having enjoyed it though Rod hadn't thought it anything. Lila was too intelligent to spoil her evening at its inception.

Later, when gaiety and the atmosphere of the club had thawed out Rod's feeling of self-consciousness she hoped to get closer to him.

She didn't know from experience what help she could expect from the relaxing influences of a supper club, but she'd heard of people who had completely forgotten themselves there, their inhibitions and other things. Perhaps Rod would forget that he shouldn't be interested in her any more.

Bertie Lou noted the self-satisfied smile on Lila's lips as she stepped from the taxicab. She glanced quickly at Rod. Guileless Rod. She knew at once that he had nothing to conceal. What a suspicious fool Lila must think her!

Rod left Lila to the ushering ability of Tom and devoted himself to seeing Bertie Lou politely into the club. Lila's eyes snapped as he turned away from her. She was further annoyed at the care with which he saw Bertie Lou seated before he took thought of her or Molly.

They had a good table. Tom was known in the place. Rod asked him to do the ordering. "You know the ropes," he said, excusing himself.

Tom was glad to comply. While he gave his cryptic orders to the waiter, Bertie Lou and Lila gave their attention to their surroundings.

The Arabesque was one of the queer clubs. Evening dress was required. The women's gowns, their glittering diamonds and endless ropes of pearls and the men's black and white dress were striking contrast to the exotic furnishings all around them. The walls were paneled in dark wood with arabesques in deep red, forest green and antique gold, used as the decorative motif.

Unlike many clubs with dazzling white lights and screeching jazz the Arabesque offered refinement. But it was, after all, a night club and as such was permeated with an air of gaiety, both forced and natural, that excited the senses and set free a desire to forget care, to live while the living was good and let tomorrow take thought of tomorrow's troubles.

Bertie Lou felt the wine of it in her tapping toes and time-beating fingers. The waiter brought something in glasses. She left it untouched to dance with Rod. Tom was dancing with Lila. They bumped into each other presently. Bertie Lou's eyes were closed dreamily. She did not see the look Lila bent upon her. Neither did Rod.

Tom asked Molly for the next dance. Bertie Lou knew Rod must dance with Lila. She hated to miss a number. Lila looked happier.

They were given time to nibble on the first course of supper. Not much time and not much supper. The musicians began softly tuning up their instruments.

And then Bertie Lou got a lucky break. The house came over and spoke to Tom. He called her by her first name and introduced her to his friends. She said they needed an extra man. There was a perfectly good one going to waste at a table all by himself. His party had moved on and the girls couldn't get to first base with him. All right to bring him over? She gave some information about him, vouched for him. Said he used his right name. One of her remarks caught Lila's attention. "Of course, he's filthy with money, if that means anything to you!"

Rod danced with Lila and Bertie Lou talked with the new man while Tom galloped around with Molly. But that, Bertie Lou was sure before the music crashed into the third number, would be the end of her warfare with Lila for this evening at least. For Lila had begun playing up to the stranger, Mr. Loree. She had her heart and soul in her work. Mr. Loree was an oldish man, but he carried the stamp of success in his crisp speech and sure, brisk manner. Bertie Lou rather liked him. Too good for Lila, but strangely, he seemed to return her interest.

Neither Tom nor Molly cared particularly for dancing. Mr. Loree did. Lila was now perfectly willing to let Bertie Lou have all the dances with Rod. So it turned out to be a much happier evening for Bertie Lou than she had anticipated. And the show was what Tom called a "wow."

Little girls with wise eyes and pert legs pointed ahead of a principal and tossed balloons to the patrons. To the ends of the stems toy jazz makers were attached. The singer came on and pleaded with everyone to make music for her. Queer sounds suddenly filled the smoky air as the revelers endeavored to favor her.

Bertie Lou spoke to Tom about the entertainer's voice. "Oh, yes," he said, "she'd good. Came to New York to study for grand opera."

Bertie Lou fell silent over the untold story. The song ended and the girl—she was just a girl—made way for the star. Bertie Lou was fascinated with the latter's costume, made of fig leaves and small red apples, but not with her voice, though she had a song that she could make a lot of.

It was about a garden. And there was a call in it somewhere to the nether regions for the last word brought a hissing horde of little red demons about her. Demons in forked tails and nothing much besides.

They began tearing at her costume, plucking away the apples and ripping off the leaves. Bertie Lou's eyes widened. Would they completely disrobe her? She glanced apprehensively at Rod. His face reflected her own alarm.

But they were not to be so entertained. As the Garden of Eden disappeared from the girl a low murmur of admiration arose from the audience. The gleaming, slithering skin of a serpent appeared bit by bit as the leaves fell to the floor.

Now creepy jungle syncopation came throbbing through the room in a slow crescendo. The girl in the snakeskin swayed almost imperceptibly, a little more, then dizzily, and finally threw herself into a series of amazing contortions that left the on-lookers breathless with fear that she might break into pieces.

At last she was down on the floor, wriggling over a strip of green carpet toward the curtained exit. As her boneless body slid from sight a storm of applause burst out, so loud that it drowned even the howling saxophones. But the girl did not respond to an encore. She was stretched out on a table under expert hands, tears of pain in her eyes. "God, that double twist is awful!" she moaned.

"How about some chicken salad and a liquidator?" Mr. Loree suggested, all memory of the club's supper gone from him. Lila said she'd rather have lobster.

"What's the use of ordering food?" Tom grumbled. "You said it and then get up to dance and that's the last you see of it unless you order the same thing over again."

Bertie Lou said nothing. She wasn't hungry, but this was Rod's party. She couldn't veto a second supper if the others wanted it. But she was beginning to suspect that this sort of entertainment would cost more than they'd bargained for. After all, however, even if Mr. Loree had added to their expense he had won her undying gratitude for turning Lila's attention from Rod. That was worth something.

When, along toward morning, Rod asked for the check, Bertie Lou took of his lifetime. One hundred and sixteen dollars. "Wow!" And he had about seventy in his pockets.

Mr. Loree was too used to money even to think of offering to pay for hospitality to which the hostess had assured him he was invited. Rod's discomfiture escaped him in Lila's dreamy eyes.

And Tom was nodding in his chair. Only Bertie Lou saw the dull red color mount in Rod's cheeks as he stared stupidly at the check.

Posture Is Basis Of All Health

DO YOU ever think of the way your child is sitting or standing? Does his posture concern you?

It should. Not long ago a man was speaking of his parents and of the sacrifices they had made to give him advantages. Then he went on to tell of his illnesses and of his mother's patient nursing—how he owed his very life to her unremitting care and watchfulness. "If I had been allowed to eat the things that most children eat," he said reflectively, "there isn't a doubt that I wouldn't be alive today. I was always sickly, always tired, always wanting to lie down."

Looked at his stooped, scholarly shoulders, his hollow chest and near-sighted eyes and could well believe that the mother who had raised him had had no easy time of it.

"There was just one thing," he went on, "I wish they had made me stand up straight."

"Are you sure they didn't try," I suggested. "They may have done their part, but perhaps you didn't do yours. I hear so many mothers tell their children to stand up straight, but it just goes in one ear and out the other."

"Yes, I can still hear Mother say, 'Hold your shoulders back, Charlie,' and I suppose I would jerk myself into position for a minute or two. But just as you say, I'd forget. I was tired, you see and I got into the habit of lounging. When I sat down I leaned my head on my hand, or cupped my chin with my elbows on my knees. I curled up or sprawled or leaned against something; I did anything but straighten out my spine and keep my chin in the air."

"Then you acknowledge it was your own fault, not your mother's?"

"Well, yes, I suppose so, but if I had a child I'd make him stand straight and sit straight and walk straight, if I had to put him into braces to do it. I'd give him exercises or put him at gym work to strengthen his weak abdominal and chest muscles. I'd get that neck of his up and his chin out if he didn't know short division or how to parse a noun. In fact I put posture before almost everything else a person can have."

"Parents shouldn't say merely, 'Stand up straight.' They should say that it is done. They do not say, 'Johnny, you must not grow up a dunce.' They say that he doesn't. One is as important as the other."

I believe my friend is right.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The Tinymites began to dance and shout. The mule held Clowdy's pants and shook him for a moment. "Twas a funny sight to see. And then he pranced upon the ground and started running 'round and 'round. Poor Clowdy yelled to all the rest, 'Hey! Someone rescue me!'"

And so the bunch joined in the fun and with the mule began to run. They chased it down a long, long hill and back up to the tents. "Hey, let him go," wee Scouty cried. The mule dropped Clowdy on his side, and Clowdy jumped and said, "Go on, and laugh at my expense."

"We couldn't help it," someone snapped. "Twas queer the way that you were trapped. The mule was much too smart for you. Of that there is no doubt. You planned to tease him. I'll just bet, but he saved you. That's what you get. However, you're not injured, so what are you kicking about?"

crowd and said, "Well, boys, I'm very proud that we have had you with us, and we're sorry we must go. The season now is nearly over. That's what I'm talking to you for. We'll shortly have to say good-bye. We're breaking up the show."

The Tinymites were quite surprised, for suddenly they realized that all the fun that they had had was now about to stop. "This life's the best that we have had," said Scouty. "Now I feel real sad to think it's almost over, and will shortly all go flying."

Some other circus folks came forth, and said, "The show is heading north to go to winter quarters. We have come to say good-bye. We'll pack tonight and then we'll leave. We hope you Tinymites don't grieve." The Tinymites just stood there. Then they all began to sigh.

Dress Distinction in Black Lines

The surprise theme at the left gives individuality to the back of a periwinkle blue crepe gown. White velvet accents the uneven V and jabot trimming of a rear decolletage, enter, and the brown velvet gown at the right adopts the basque for an unusual rear effect.

BY HENRI BENDEL
NEW YORK—Milady is smartest this winter when she turns her back to chic. For the gown of the season is the one that achieves distinction in its rear lines.

There is a tendency towards fewer bows, bustles and real ornamentation below the waistline. And with this comes more stress on the cut of the decolletage, the rear of the bodice and the manner of emphasizing the waistline or ignoring it altogether.

Flat backs are the new note, with elaborate manipulating so they will be extremely graceful lines and unusual.

NEW NECK LINES
Therefore we have the wide, deep, square neck, the very deep V, the U neck that is called the necklace neck, and a number of other diagonally line ones and irregularly cut ones—all intricately cut to give a svelt back to evening gowns.

This same importance of the rear is noted on coats, where the back yoke is emphasized, where the collar of fur is often slit to allow kasha or contrasting fur scarfs to pass through, where there may be a back belt and yoke of some unique design.

But evening gowns crystallize this movement. Therefore I illustrate my point by using evening gowns.

Paquin, for instance, simulates the surprise cut that is usually reserved for front treatment, on a periwinkle blue silk crepe import. The ends of the bodice cross in smart, tailored fashion to fasten like an ornament about four inches from the crossing. This is exactly at the waistline, as emphasized by a skirt yoke of slanting line that introduces uneven godets on the rear left and front right side.

This peculiar treatment gives a new armhole, one that would have been rejected last season, a wide, full one that allows a blouse to the bodice and a much fuller appearance than heretofore featured. The front lines also, with the same light line from the normal waist to hipline.

On a black satin gown of princess lines, I have used to advantage an irregular rear decolletage and to emphasize its irregularity have piped it with white velvet, which gives a very soft line. Slightly above the waistline, a white-lined black satin bow with three loops falls gracefully, like a jabot.

ONE HAS ORGAN PLEATS
The front of this gown has the same irregular neckline and an irregular hemline.

A third type of unusual back treatment is seen in a brown transparent velvet gown with organ pleating attached to a long bodice. The bodice of this is virtually a basque, with the closing, and hence the shirring, on the right side at the back.

This gives a charming slant to the back of the dress, which is followed by the upward slope of the upper holds of the full skirt. The front of this neck is square, another new note, that of combining a square front, with a different back cut.

BREAKFAST—Chilled apple sauce, cereal, cream, fish balls, tomato sauce, cornmeal and wheat muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Stuffed eggplant, raisin bread, peach and melon salad, milk, tea.

DINNER—Cauliflower cocktail, mock fillet mignon, French fried potatoes, New England succotash, peach cream in cantaloupes, milk, coffee.

Don't forget the simple expedient of shaping ground round steak in small flat cakes and binding with a strip of bacon held firmly with wooden toothpicks. These can be par-broiled or ready broiled in the broiler just like real fillet mignon.

CAULIFLOWER COCKTAIL.
One small firm head cauliflower, 2 tomatoes, 1 teaspoon minced chives, French dressing.

Remove outer stalks from cauliflower and separate into flowerettes. Let stand in cold salt water for one hour. Drain and chill on ice. Peel tomatoes and cut in dice. Dice cauliflower and add tomatoes and minced chives. Pour over French dressing and let stand thirty minutes on ice. Serve in cocktail glasses. This is an unusually pretty cocktail and deliciously tempting.

THE NEW Saint Sinner

By Anne Austin

Faith Hathaway was paying a mid-week, spend-the-day visit to her adored sister, Cherry, at the Jonson home a half hour's drive from Stanton. The two sisters were stretched at ease in comfortable big garden chairs, set in the shade of luscious, gnarled old apple trees behind the white Colonial farmhouse that had been renovated and made very smart for Cherry's coming as a bride seven months before.

"Isn't it lush?" Cherry yawned, raising a small, bare white arm to wave it languidly in a gesture that included the beautiful old house, the orchard, the old-fashioned garden and in the distance, the model dairy barns and clover fields, in which Nils Jonson's blooded cattle drowsed through the long, hot afternoon.

"Contented cows," she murmured, her golden eyes narrowing as she studied the distant cattle. "Heavens knows they ought to be contented. Nils pampers them as if they were visiting royalty. He's put a fortune into those pedigreed beasts, but they are beauties and I love them.... I have a darling little fawn-colored calf that I've named Faith.... Do you mind? She'll be a blue-ribbon milk cow some day.... Isn't it funny, Faith?—me, a contented cow, too! Imagine it, darling—I'm still in love with my husband.... And you with Bob?"

"More than ever," Faith answered simply. "Robin—God bless him!—was just what we needed. I feel so utterly married, Cherry.... Twaddled deep as a writer expressed it."

"Funny, but I don't feel that way," Cherry announced, a little rebelliously. "I feel as if I'm living with a lover, who might leave me any minute if he got tired of me. Perhaps it's because Nils never makes an promises about loving me forever, or even next week. It's an exciting game to get him to say he loves me at all...."

"Oh, but he adores you!" Faith scoffed, laughing her low, rich contralto laugh. "You're just working hard at keeping the thrill in marriage and Nils is clever enough to guess your game and play it, too. I'm afraid Bob isn't at all subtle. He's definitely a husband and seems mightily relieved that the first hard year of doubt and adjustment and misunderstanding is over."

"Relieved—or bored?" Cherry asked lazily, as if unconscious of her crudely. "Don't let him get to feeling too awfully married, honey. Bad for him—bad for you. By the way, I had lunch with Bob yesterday when I was in town shopping and he says you invited that Crystal girl to stay on indefinitely. Bad business, sister o' mine."

Faith flushed and pushed the moist dark hair away from her high forehead with a hand that, surprisingly enough, trembled a little. She had not known that Bob had lunch with Cherry.... He had not told her.... Were there other things he didn't tell her? "Crystal needs me, Cherry. She's an orphan, you know, without a penny. I felt that, in a way, I owed it to Bob to do something for Crystal, since I had—"

"Had let him support the Lanes so long?" Cherry finished for her sister. "It's all right, darling. I deserved it. But I don't like that girl. She gives me the fidgets.... Boy-crazy, conceited...."

"Not conceited at all, really," Faith denied vigorously. "The poor child has such a dreadful inferiority complex that she appears conceited, artificial.... She has a job, by the way. Did Bob tell you about it?"

What They Wear When On The Links

Richard Arlen, Movie Star

BY CURTIS WOOD
NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK—Sports clothes seem to grow sponger as day-time apparel for men grows gayer.

There's plenty of white and cream being worn on the links and courts. But I notice that when all white loses to some other color, it's pretty good bet it will be a quiet one—brown, tan or navy blue.

Richard Arlen demonstrates this new trend in sports togs in a black and grey ensemble he often wears for his daily golf. The long bags are of black flannel, his pullover a somber grey tick pattern of grey, with black trim and his shoes black with grey, black and white pigd socks.

Of course it is possible to wear all white or a somber get-up and be extremely smart and different. Big Bill Tilden, for instance, wears a new tennis shirt that has a novel shawl collar—the kind men usually have for dressing gowns, not shirts.

The soft woolen tennis shirts—knitted ones—show increasing popularity as the end of the season arrives. They're really two-in-ones, in a way, allowing a man to dispense with his sweater and still have enough wool about him to get warmed up at his game easily.

Color comes in all of man's accessories for daytime. Colored hat-bands promise to outlast summer, the ensemble set of vivid tie, kerchief and socks are still good. And men's shirts are trying new and more colorful each day. It is possible to follow to get even an apricot colored shirt, in fine madras or silk, a shade that used to be left strictly to the women.

NEXT LEGISLATURE WILL HAVE NO WOMEN

Madison—(AP)—Wisconsin's next legislature will be a stage affair. There are no women employees, by law, and at the September primary the only woman legislator, Miss Helen F. Thompson, of Park Falls, was defeated for renomination.

Miss Thompson was one of the "attractors" during the last session because she was the only woman in the two houses. She survived two other women in being elected two years ago. Her lead was small, however, and this time she met defeat. L. Shauger of Ogemaw, taking her nomination. He is chairman of the Rice-Edwards board.

The only other women who served in the legislature were Miss Mildred Barber and Mrs. Helen H. Brooks, assemblywomen in the 1925 session.

KAUKAUNA DROPS LAST GAME 7 TO 3 TO LEAGUE CHAMPS

Victors Cinch Game in Second and Third Innings by Bunching Hits

Kaukauna—By bunching their hits, Kimberly-Little Chute was able to trim the Kaukauna ball club by a score of 7 to 3 in a post-season game at the local ball park Sunday afternoon. All scores were made in the first three innings. Kaukauna took a three run lead in the first inning. Kim-Little Chute netted four in the second inning and then clinched the game by gathering in three more in the third inning.

Pocan was the heavy gun for the Hollanders. He struck out nine men, allowed only five hits and hit twice in four trips to bat. Theln also did brilliant work for the Chuteers by knocking out two two-base hits in three trips to the plate.

Kaukauna had four errors and the first two were probably fatal. The first Kim-Little Chute to get on base was through an error made by Amede. Two men immediately hit and he scored. The second error was in the same inning and was committed by Gertz. Two men scored on that error.

B. Lamers featured the game with a home run which he hit over the left field fence in the third stanza. He is a left handed hitter. Each team made a double play. The first was made by the Chuteers in the third inning, when Amede hit to Muench, short stop. He threw to second base to force L. Smith out and then M. Lamers, who was on second threw to first to make Abbott out. The double play for Kaukauna came in the eighth frame. Moore was playing short stop. He made a beautiful catch and then threw to first to make Hammen out at first base.

KAUKAUNA SCORES EARLY Wenzel played true to form during the game and caught a perfect throw to first base to catch a man who was leading off from it. Wenzel also tallied for the locals. Moore played a fine field game. He covered much territory, and played short stop after he was placed there in the sixth inning, like a veteran.

Kaukauna started in the first frame by scoring three runs. R. Smith hit a fly to left field and B. Lamers muffed it, letting Smith get to second base. Then M. Lamers hit a fly to center field and R. Smith scored the first run of the game. L. Smith flew out but Wenzel made a clean hit for a single. Abbott flew to Pocan, and Amede was walked. Gertz went to the plate with two down and the bases loaded. He put the ball safely in center field for a one base hit, letting Moore and Gertz score. Sager then struck out to end the inning.

Kim-Little Chute did all the scoring in the next inning. M. Lamers went to first on an error by Amede, Pocan singled, and then Theln slammed out a two base hit to let Lamers score. VanderLoop hit a high fly to Les Smith in center field and Hartjes struck out. Hammen went to first on an error by Gertz and Pocan and Theln tallied. Muench followed with a triple and Hammen scored. M. Lamers flew to Moore.

The third inning was all Kim-Little Chute's also. L. Smith made out and B. Lamers came to bat to sock Abbott for a homer. Pocan fouled to Phillips. Theln doubled and VanderLoop singled scoring Theln. Hartjes also doubled to bring VanderLoop home. This was the last score to be made during the game.

GAME ENDS SEASON Little Chute got hits in the fifth, seventh, and ninth innings. Kaukauna hit in the fifth and sixth inning. The game ended 7 to 3 in favor of Kim-Little Chute.

This was the last game of the season and was not a Fox River Valley team game in which Little Chute won the league pennant and Kaukauna was the runner up. The teams mixed during the league season four times and each won two games. The last game was the Hollanders three wins out of five against Kaukauna.

How To Play Bridge

BY Milton C. Work

Although there are two recognized types of hands with which a partner's untested No Trump should be overcalled, it is only in a minority of cases that either of these types occur; in the vast majority of cases, when an initial No Trump has been bid and passed by the next adversary, the partner of the No Trumper should pass also. But there are two types of hands with which partner's untested No Trump should be overcalled.

STRENGTH TAKE OUTS
Supposing that a No Trump has been bid and passed by the adversary next in order, and that the partner of the No Trumper holds:

1. AXXX
2. AXX
3. KXX
4. XX

Such a hand of course furnishes very valuable assistance for the partner.

made the characters appear real and human.

Gilbert contributes a characterization which tops anything he has displayed in the way of acting ability since "The Big Parade." He makes Ben Horowitz, gangster, a real live personality that struggles, suffers and finally conquers in a manner that will grip the heartstrings of every audience in the country.

The story concerns a young gangster leader who accidentally wounds a man in a night club brawl and is sent to prison for four years. At first he fights against the "Four Walls" of the prison but later comes to understand that his whole life in the New York East Side has been spent within the grip of even stronger walls. On his release he resolves to go straight and his struggles to do so and yet solve the problem of his love for Joan Crawford constitute the highlight of the picture.

Miss Crawford as the erring heroine presents an entirely new side of her personality to the movie going public. There have been rumors that next year will see her a star and this picture clearly demonstrates her fitness.

Vera Gordon as Gilbert's mother contributes a great ability as an actress while Carmel Myers as Bertha, the "plain girl," also shows herself in a new light. Robert Emmett O'Connor as Sullivan the detective is very excellent as is Louis Natheaux who plays the gangster "Monk."

her's No Trump, but if Suit 1 be a Major, it may be that there will be game in the Major and not in the No Trump and that passing the No Trump would result in permitting the adversaries to save the game, whereas bidding the Major would ensure game. On the other hand, supposing Suit 1 to be a Minor, it is possible that there may be game in the combined hands with the Minor trump and not at No Trump; but this possibility is very remote because there are comparatively few hands which will produce ELEVEN tricks with a Minor trump and fail to produce NINE tricks at a No Trump. There are, however, many hands that will produce TEN tricks for a Major-suit contract and fail to produce NINE tricks for a No Trump contract. This is not because it is any more difficult to make the requisite number of tricks with a Minor trump than it is with a Major, but because there is a wide gulf between the ability to make ten tricks and eleven tricks.

Thousands of hands are dealt every day in which it is possible to make ten tricks with the suit that best fits the combined hands, but utterly impossible to make eleven. For this reason expert players, when the score is love, prefer a Major that fits to a No Trump, and a No Trump to a Minor.

The consideration of No Trump take outs will be continued on Non day next.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week for about six weeks, Mr. Work will present a most interesting and instructive series of Auction Bridge queries.

ADVISES COUNTY TO SUE
CITY FOR TAX RECEIPTS

Madison (P)—In an opinion to district attorney Herman C. Runge, of Sheboygan-co the state attorney general's department held that where a county levies a tax for highway purposes collected in part by one of the cities in the county but not turned over to the county, the county should start action against the city treasurer and his bondsmen.

The request for an opinion was based on the retention of $407,400 by the city of Sheboygan, even after the state supreme court had reversed the circuit court and held that the money was due to the county treasury. The county board has instructed Mr. Runge to recover the county highway funds.

Hugh A. Minahan, deputy attorney general, told Mr. Runge "I think the county treasurer should first issue his warrant to the sheriff commanding him to levy the amount remaining unpaid with interest and damages together with fees for collecting same. If it cannot be collected that way an action should be commenced in the name of the county against the city treasurer and his bondsmen.

Hold a Council of War—against the Common Cold

The discoveries of modern science make overheating of the home a matter that seriously concerns every member of your family.

Years ago, shrewd old Benjamin Franklin thought that colds must have something to do with heating. Modern scientific men have proved that this is a fact. In tests in New York city schoolrooms by Dr. C.-E. A. Winslow, professor of public health in the Yale School of Medicine, overheating by only two degrees caused a seventy per cent increase in respiratory illness.

Automatic Heat Control Prevents Overheating

Our unique "10-point Demonstration" shows you the one practical way to prevent overheating: To install an automatic temperature regulator on your home heating plant. Also explains how you obtain steady heat without anyone ever touching dampers or drafts — fuel saving—warm rooms to dress in, through clock control. Call here, or phone for an appointment at your own home any day or evening. Easy payments on our Budget Plan.

PROSPECT OF NEW GOVERNOR WORRIES STATE OFFICIALS

Predict There Will Be Many New Faces in Capitol as Terms Expire

Madison—(P)—The King is dead: Long live the King:

This cry that greets the death of a monarch and the anticipated succession, is faintly echoing through the halls of the state Capitol these days as state officers and their employees read the final official election figures.

Governor Zimmerman is shown by these figures to be in his political shroud, temporarily at least and his appointees—some of them at least—are being measured for black to accompany the procession out of the building.

With the coming of a new governor in January, whether it be Walter J. Kohler, Republican nominee, Mayor Schmiedeman of Madison, Democratic hope, or some dark horse, there is a chance that at least 35 members of boards and commissions and other appointive officers may "decide to enter private life," and leave the state service.

Among the more important of these officers are two members of the conservation commission, whose terms, according to newspaper records, expire during the term of the incoming executive. This body was only created by the last legislature and the terms are arranged to expire so that within a few years all may be appointed for the same term.

COMMISSIONER SAFE

Banking Commissioner C. F. Schwenker is expected to be immune from the political appointment and reappointment for a few more years, unless he should be removed "for cause." Governor Zimmerman's records show him to have been appointed for a four year term.

The senate's confirmation of the appointment of John C. Harris of Waukesha as a member of the board of control is the determining factor in the ability of a future governor to remove him. If the appointment was confirmed by the senate he cannot be removed except for cause. If it was not the law says the following governor shall report it to the senate upon its convening or shall give the senate another name for approval.

There are several minor boards and commissions, including the boards of vocational education, optometry, pharmacy and conciliating have many members which are to be subject to expiring terms and consequent changes of lost jobs.

TERM EXPIRES

One member of the civil service commission, J. A. Peacock, Oconomowoc, will find his term expiring in June, 1929. He was appointed to the place by former Governor Blaine and as he has been a Progressive and a supporter of the governor, he is likely to meet the new governor's appointee coming in as he is going out—that is if the next governor is opposed to the Progressives.

Walter A. Duffy, commissioner of agriculture is another of the Zimmerman appointees whose appointment is for a term extending into the succeeding administration, but whose choice was confirmed by the senate and who is therefore secure in his place, save by explosion for failure to perform his duties.

Several members of the grain and warehouse commission, which has offices at Superior, are subject to change by the governor of 1929-30. On the board of health, L. A. Steffan, Antigo, faces an expiring term.

On the highway commission, bone of contention early in the Zimmerman administration, Mr. Kohler, Mr. Beck, or the unknown will find Dwight S. Welch, Baraboo, sitting on the uneasy seat with the possibility of it being jerked out from under him in February, 1929.

OTHER TERM EXPIRES

The term of Otto Krabetz, one of the industrial commissioners, expires in June, 1929. He was appointed to the post by Governor Zimmerman.

Milton A. Freedy, insurance commissioner, will provide one of the interesting "follow-ups" of the gubernatorial campaign. He is the brother-in-law of the present Governor. Speculation will soon be found among insurance men as to whether this post will be vacant by virtue of Mr. Freedy's resignation to leave the service with his brother-in-law. He is secure as far as term goes until June, 1931, and his name was confirmed by the Senate early during the session. His leaving or staying will be a matter of personal preference.

In like position is another important Zimmerman appointee, James A. Vint, commissioner of markets. His term extends past that of the incoming executive and he has been confirmed by the legislature's upper house.

MEDICS JOBS UNSAFE

About half of the state board of medical examiners is subject to reappointment or replacement.

Four members of the state board of normal registrars in charge of all of the state teachers' colleges in Wisconsin are facing languishing terms. E. J. Dempsey, Oshkosh, president of the board, finds his term expiring in February 1929, along with that of P. Rainer, River Falls, former president. Others are Mrs. Elizabeth Maloney, Stevens Point and John C. Kathel, Whitewater, both of whose terms expire in February 1929.

Granville Trace, editor for the printing board, is subject to the will of the incoming chief, the books show.

Roland W. Dixon, senate-confirmer, holds over under an extended term, and is only in danger, like the other hold-over appointment, of having his office moved out from under his desk by the legislature.

MORE EXPIRATIONS

Three members of the state board of public affairs, all those, in fact, not ex-officio members by virtue of their membership in the legislature, are subject to removal in 1929 and with announcement of new non-salaried board a change might be made in the office of C. J. Blough, secretary of the board. His appoint-

RAILROAD MIGHT CHANGE SIGNALS ON 18 CROSSINGS

If permission is granted by the city, the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Co. will install a number of wig wag signals on the most dangerous railroad crossings in Appleton. Notification of the railroad company's plans was received by Mayor or Albert C. Rule several months ago from the railroad commission. Presented to the common council, the notice was referred to the streets and bridges committee, which reported at the next council meeting that it had deferred action. The committee hopes to have its report prepared for the next aldermanic meeting.

Changes in signal protection have been proposed for 18 streets:

Two wig wag signals, one with a bell on each side of the tracks, is planned for Meade st. A flagman, working from 7 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night, is now stationed there. The same improvement is scheduled for Lave-st. Gates are now in operation at that crossing.

Three wig wag signals, two equipped with bells, would be installed on Union and Winnebago-sts. Gates are now operated there from 7:30 in the morning until 6:30 at night.

Drew and Hancock-sts also would have two wig wag signals each, one on each street to have a bell. Hancock-st is not now protected. A flag is the only protection on Drew-st.

The Durkee-st crossing would get two wig wags, one with a bell. A flagman is stationed on that crossing at present.

The flagman at Atlantic-st would be replaced by two wig wags, while Morrison and Pacific-sts each would get two of the same kind of signals, one on each street to have a bell. There is a flagman at each of the latter two crossings now.

It is proposed to replace the gates at the Oneida-st crossings with two wig wag signals, one having a bell. Appleton and Bates-sts are included in the improvements, each crossing to be equipped with two signals, one on each crossing, to have a bell. Gates are now operated on both crossings from 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m.

Superior-st crossing, now guarded by gates, would get two signals, one of the bell variety, and the Division-st crossing, where a flagman is now located, would also be equipped with bell signal and one without the bell.

The flagman at the State-st crossing is due to be replaced with two signals, and two signals would be erected at Lawrence-st and two at Locust-st. Flagmen and gates now protect the two latter crossings.

Air Liner Falls With Five Persons Aboard

These remarkable pictures, taken by a photographer for NEA Service and The Post-Crescent, show the dead and injured being taken from the floating wreckage of the Packard Electric Company's big air liner, Miss Packard, after the giant plane had struck a high tension wire and fallen into the Rock river, near Rockford, Ill. Pilot M. E. Headley of Warren, O., was killed outright and his four passengers were injured, two of them seriously. The pilot, completing a 10,000-mile tour for the Packard Electric Co. of Warren, O., was taking a quartet of its Rockford representatives for a ride. The Miss Packard was a sister ship to Burt Hassell's Greater Rockford, which flew to Greenland recently.

Pete Recommends This As A Good Reducing Exercise

Now, ordinarily, a county motorcycle officer's duties do not include herding cows—but there are exceptions.

But what is a fellow going to do when he's on his way home about 11 o'clock at night and he finds a herd of 30 cows, all sizes and shapes, monopolizing the highway. Motorcycle officer Peter J. Blanshahn wants to know.

"You'd have done the same thing I did," Pete said. "Park your motorcycle and spend the next three hours chasing cows, keeping them from (to them) a fine looking cornfield. Did I say chase—and how?"

It seems Pete was on his way home about 11 o'clock Friday night and while traveling Highway 55 in the town of Seymour he found himself in the very predicament mentioned above.

"Well, I couldn't see that herd of cows ruining that fine cornfield so I just started to round them up," Officer Blanshahn said.

And thereby hangs a tale.

Officer Blanshahn sweated, and tugged, and chased, and called, and coaxed and coaxed, and walked, and sneaked and fought with those cows for three hours before he finally rounded them into a convenient barn yard nearby.

"And I did not forget to lock the gate as did the two farmers from whose pastures the herds escaped," Officer Blanshahn said.

Saturday morning it was found the animals had wandered along the road from two farmhouses three miles apart.

One of the cows, who seemed to recognize that official uniform, was the ring leader in the trouble. She probably said to herself,

"I may as well be hung for a sheep as for a lamb. I'm in trouble with the law anyway so I'll make all the trouble I can."

And she did.

When Pete approached from the right she gracefully swung to the left—and by the way took as many of her henchwomen along as possible.

Every trick and device he thought of was used by Officer Blanshahn to no effect. The (this part was crossed out by the editor)—cow refused to be herded.

Finally, using strategy, if tying a rope around the ringleader's neck and fairly dragging her to prison, can be termed strategy, Officer Blanshahn achieved success—although it was marred by a sweet colored body.

JAZZ DROWNS OUT BEAT OF TOM-TOM

Garrison, N. D. —(P)—Jazz has drowned out the beat of the tom-tom in the life of young Anikara Indian braves on the Fort Berthold reservation west of here. As a result the Dead Grass society may have held its last ceremonial.

The Dead Grass society is a secret organization, old as the tribe itself. Each year a work is given over to rites symbolizing the withering of grass to make way for new. The Anikara concept is that the old men are the dead grass and the young men the new growth.

When the ceremony was held recently, all the old braves participated but the young men and women were devoted to modern music and the old chants of their forefathers remained away.

Consequently the chanting of Red Bear, Bear's Boy and Little Sun, all veterans of the Great War, held a note of anti-protest, for the fact that the ceremony of the dead grass was passing.

SCHOOL BANKS TO OPEN NEXT TUESDAY

B. J. Rohan, Superintendent of Schools, Indorses Thrift Plan

Children of public grammar schools and junior and senior high schools next Tuesday will observe the first of the weekly bank days of the school year. The day not only marks another milestone on the road to money thrift, according to B. J. Rohan, superintendent of schools, but on the road to time and endeavor thrift. Bank day is but a small part of the large scheme which is teaching the school children to budget their time and plan their expenditures of effort.

"A man can be saving of money, but if he squanders his time, he is a spendthrift," Mr. Rohan said.

Bank day will be run on the same system as has been used for the past seven years. Hundred per cent signs on rooms in which each child has deposited will be spurs in the intra-school competition.

Some children, according to the superintendent, can deposit no more than a penny a week. It is not the amount but the habit which is encouraged. Teachers endeavor to impress on the children that money regularly saved can rather tremendous force over a period of years.

NEW MANITOWOC HIGH SCHOOL IS CROWDED

Manitowoc—With 1,058 pupils registered, the new Lincoln high school completed less than five years ago to accommodate 1,200 students, already is crowded. Part of the cafeteria and every small anteroom will be used for class purposes, C. G. Stancel, principal, stated.

While there is no plan to build an addition, the situation is causing the board of education concern.

Last year the first week of school there were 1,066 registered, but about 50 left school during the year. The building is one of the finest in the state and the pride of the city.

If cold light could be developed, 20 times as much light would be obtained from the same amount of electricity as now.

Your Question And Its Answer

By J. A. Panneck, D. C. PALMER CHIROPRACTOR

QUESTION: I suffer from periodical headaches, also stomach trouble and hay fever which interferes greatly with my work. Have been doctoring for years with no relief. Can you give me any hope?—E. R. B.

ANSWER: If any organ is abnormal in its function it is because the proper amount of nerve force is not being received by it through the nervous system. This force emanates from the brain and is distributed by the nerves to every tissue and organ in the body.

The only place that this transmission of energy can be interfered with is where the nerve trunks leave the spine between vertebrae, where there are small openings on both sides, called foramina. Wherever these bones are out of normal position, the small openings or foramina are decreased in size, hence pressure upon the spinal nerves which lie in these openings is produced. It is this pinching of the nerves which decreases their capacity for the carrying of energy, hence an insufficient amount of nerve energy gets to the organ which these nerves supply. Knowing then that the primary cause of disease lies in the spine, the chiropractor examines this structure for the misaligned vertebrae which are pinching the nerve pressures responsible for the disease, and with his hands only, replaces these segments to their proper position. The releasing of spinal nerve pressure in this manner allows the kidneys, liver, stomach, bowels, bronchial tubes or whatever organs are affected, to resume normal function and in due time health is the natural result. Therefore, I suggest that you consult a competent Palmer Chiropractor for further information regarding your health problems.

QUESTION: What is the instrument used in your practice?—J. A. Panneck

ANSWER: This instrument is called the Neurocalometer. It locates for us the impinged nerve, and then by our check reading after the adjustment is given it proves to us whether or not the adjustment was given scientifically and correctly. It leads us straight to the back, to the location of the impinged nerve, to the adjustment of the proper vertebrae and to the release of the impingement; it proves the science of chiropractic to be correct.

Roosevelts Have Corner On Navy Secretary Job

BY KIRKPATRICK SIMPSON

Washington When you stop to think of it, the job of assistant secretary of the navy seems to have a lot of potential in its most distinguished holder, Theodore Roosevelt. For the last four presidential terms it has been the exclusive property of somebody of the Roosevelt blood.

First, under President Wilson, came Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, holding cousinly relations of more or less remote character, with the republican blood of the family. He quite to run for vice president with Cox in 1920. Then a nice hard line came Theodore 2nd, son of the late president. He carried on until he understood in his capacity of politician at large, the honest job of trying to beat "Al Smith" for governor of New York.

Then came Douglas Robinson, christened Theodore Douglas, son of a sister of the original Theodore. And he's still working at the business. Now where is Hoover or Smith, as the case may be, to find a new Roosevelt to second in command of the navy? Certainly, if Smith wins, it will not be Frank. He has grown mighty in political caliber since he came, a happy youngster, to Washington official life with the Wilson administration. The man who dubbed Smith "the happy warrior" in the Houston nominating speech would rate a more heavy-weight job if he would accept any, which is doubtful, in the vent of a Smith victory.

Another figure in this curious interlocking of blood or friendship athwart political lines is Trubee Davison, air assistant secretary in the war department. He is an old time friendly terms with the democratic Roosevelt clan and every influence a pillar of the democratic party like Frank Roosevelt could exert in selection of a republican sub-cabinet went to boost young Davison for his present job.

Since the Smith nomination, Davison a good New Yorker, has been kidded a bit from the Roosevelt democratic camp.

"I've been insulted," he said the other day. "I have a letter from Louie Howe (Frank Roosevelt's secretary) offering me a post in the Smith cabinet."

Incidentally, the democratic Roosevelt's old time chief, "Uncle Joe" Daniels of North Carolina, has not forgotten his navy days. Travelers from Raleigh report his home there armed at the bow with a large and imposing naval gun trophy, and moored at the stern by a ship's anchor almost equally large.

Our Presidents

It was during Jefferson's administration that the Lewis and Clarke expedition left St. Louis, in 1804 and went 1600 miles up the Missouri river before winter set in. In the spring they crossed the Rockies and went to the mouth of the Columbia, exploring a vast new domain. Their exploration helped establish the United States' claim to Oregon later in a dispute with Britain.

In 1807 Robert Fulton ran his steamboat, the Clermont, and soon such boats were plying all navigable streams.

A sad event of Jefferson's administration was the slaying of Alexander Hamilton by Aaron Burr in a duel.

One legislative mistake of Jefferson's administration caused hard times in the United States. That was the Embargo act, forbidding any trade with foreign countries, passed with the intention of punishing France and England. Jefferson, like Washington, however, had a chance for a third term, which he declined. He died July 4, 1826, the same day as John Adams.

Diplomatic Activities Cheat Corps Of Vacations

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Washington—It is an appalling fact that summer seems to have become a time of diplomatic activity, to the great interruption of diplomatic crops vacation outings in cooler climates than Washington.

The genial Henry Chilton, C. M. G., E. E. and M. P., acting counselor and second in command at the British embassy, was the victim Esme Howard, being absent on a trip home. Last year Sir Esme himself came posthaste from the summer embassy to confer with Secretary Kellogg when the three-power naval conference at Geneva headed for the rocks. This year Counselor Chilton came steaming back to town from the seashore up north on the heels of an announcement that a Franco-British naval limitation accord had been reached. What it was all about this time was not clear. Probably it was up to the counselor to furnish a little more detailed explanation of the affair by way of clearing the air between Washington and London. That's what diplomats are for. At any rate, it interrupted a summer that must have been much more enjoyable out of Washington.

AWAIT NEW HOME

For one thing, the embassy itself is about to be transferred to new and sumptuous quarters now building up the slopes of fashionable Massachusetts avenue. The old embassy on Connecticut avenue, so long a caddybump caddy mfwywpwpmfwy, graced by gilded British crowns to top off its gateway lamp post pillars, is soon to pass into history, an apartment house taking its place. Just now it is almost isolated by street widening and sewer operations and the new embassy, a virtual British royal colony, is far from ready. Hastily shot up wooden temporary structures, relics of war time expansions, still fill the old embassy grounds and house much of its activities.

Incidentally, absence of the President from the city serves to release

167 MEN WILL BE TRIED ON LIQUOR CHARGES IN EAST

Officials Wonder How They'll Conduct Hearings in Room Large Enough to Hold 150

Pittsburgh, Pa.—With a cry of more than a half million thirsting to hear the sensational disclosures that are expected, federal court officials here are trying to figure out how they are going to try 167 members of Pittsburgh's alleged "liquor ring" in a courtroom that can accommodate only 150 persons.

The 167 are included in a blanket indictment, possibly the largest ever returned in the United States, charging conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law. The largest courtroom in the historic old federal building will, according to careful estimates, hold only 150 persons, including judge, jury, attorneys, defendants, newspapermen and spectators.

Among the "higher-ups" who are scheduled to be tried when the case comes up in November are men prominent in police and political circles.

DEFENDANTS PROMINENT

They include: Superintendent Peter P. Walsh of the Pittsburgh police department. Police Inspectors Charles Faulkner, John J. McArdle and Joseph J. Elsner.

Police Magistrates J. J. Sweeney and John W. Orie.

Luke Sullivan and Samuel J. Grenet, members of Pennsylvania legislature.

In addition to these notables, police lieutenants, ward chairmen, retired police officers, policemen, a constable, a former prohibition agent and many alleged "fixers" are named in the indictment. Police Lieutenant Samuel Graham, nationally known as a golfer, is also a defendant.

The charge against Supt. Walsh in the indictment is fairly indicative of the others. It alleges that during 1926 and 1927 Supt. Walsh "did know and did permit certain liquor dealings in concessions for the unlawful traffic of intoxicating liquor by various persons within the said city of Pittsburgh."

The approaching conspiracy trial results from a quiet but extensive investigation made here by Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington. He had dozens of investigators busy for months gathering the evidence. Meanwhile, bootleggers were rejoicing because no dry raids were being made. They were disillusioned when the grand jury met and indicted 167 persons.

U. S. District Attorney John D. Meyer and Assistant Ralph Smith and Joseph Richardson marshaled 1158 witnesses before the grand jury to tell their story. It is likely that many of them will be called as witnesses at the trial.

All but a few of the 167 defendants have been arrested and U. S. Marshal James C. McGregor feels sure he will have the rest by the time the trial begins. The court clerk has approximately $800,000 in property impounded as a result of the big indictment.

Under the law, each defendant is entitled to an attorney. Should each employ counsel, there would be 167 attorneys on the defense side alone, or a total of 334 defendants and attorneys. The latter, together with the government's prosecuting staff, the jury, court attaches, stenographers, newspapermen—not to mention the 1,158 witnesses—are faced with

WOMEN CAN BE GOOD AVIATORS, LADY SAYS

London—(AP)—"I am firmly convinced that aviation has come to stay, so far as our women are concerned, as in Russia, China, Japan, Roumania, Sweden, Holland and all those other countries which boast of successful women pilots," says Lady Heath, noted British pilot in an interview in the Sporting Life.

"It is little realized the part women have played in the history of many conquests of the air. They are many and glorious. She has stood by men not only in the actual flying, but in the general development and construction of aircraft, and when she has not done this she has helped in less direct but not less substantial way by her encouragement and support."

BUSINESS MAN ENDORSES DRECO

Declares It Gave Prompt Relief From Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism.

"For about four years I have been troubled by a weakness in my legs and stiff, painful joints. Some times it would get so bad I could hardly walk and would trip over the least little thing," says Mr. J. P. Melchior who operates a general store and two cheese factories at Wallace, Mich., near Marquette, Wis.

"My stomach also caused me a lot of uneasiness and would bloat up with sour gas often causing difficult breathing. I also suffered from constipation most of the time."

"I have taken two bottles of Dreco and my improvement has been splendid. The stiffness in all gone from my joints, my legs are stronger, am free of constipation, never have the sour gas any more and in fact my whole system seems to have been greatly improved by Dreco. I have told a good many of my customers about Dreco and some of them have taken it on my recommendation."

The Dreco mentioned above is a root and herb preparation of unusual merit. It is very effective in toning up the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and ending suffering and pain. Try it and you'll recommend it too. Sold by Schlitz Bros. and other leading druggists.

NOTHING SECRET IN FRANCO-BRITISH PACT

So Says M. Briand Before League Assembly—Irishman Asks Disarmament

Geneva—(AP)—Aristide Briand, foreign minister of France, Monday told the assembly of the league of nations that there were no secret clauses in the Franco-British naval accord. He said it had been arranged for the sole purpose of facilitating reduction of armaments.

M. Briand spoke from the rostrum of the assembly. Delegates of 50 nations formed his audience and they applauded as he emphasized the peaceful purpose of the understanding.

M. Briand referred to the naval understanding between France and Great Britain, saying the two governments had thought that they were accomplishing something toward the peace of the world but the result had been singularly unfortunate. M. Briand pledged French cooperation in disarmament discussion.

M. Briand used ridicule in driving home his denial of whispers heard recently in many European quarters that the accord contained more provisions than appeared on the surface or had been made public.

The address followed a plea for an international disarmament conference before next year's assembly which was given by E. Blythe, vice president of the executive council and minister of finance, posts and telegraph of the Irish Free state. He recommended that a time limit be put on the work of the preparatory disarmament commission.

Mr. Blythe said that the Kellogg pact made war a crime and an outrage. He hailed the initiative taken by the United States in this and said that his own government was in the best sympathy with the entire movement.

Jack And Estelle Are Numbered Among Hollywood's Few Happy Wedded Couples

BY DAN THOMAS
Hollywood, Calif.—One of the most palatial homes in all Hollywood... expensive automobiles... a private swimming pool... servants galore... and every luxury that even a king and queen could desire.

Those are the things that Jack Dempsey, known in some of the more exclusive social circles as William Harrison Dempsey and his actress wife, Estelle Taylor, gave up when they foissok Hollywood to appear in David Belasco's stage play, "The Big Fight," in New York this winter.

"FOR ART'S SAKE" Jack and Estelle are numbered among the few happily married couples in make-believe village. They enjoy every comfort that life affords. But all of those things have been given up, even though not forgotten, so that they may rehearse for the opening of their play in New York. Fun thrown to the winds — "for art's sake" Estelle told me just before she entrained for the eastern metropolis.

Dempsey doesn't see any reason why he shouldn't capitalize upon his fighting popularity to the tune of 10,000 good-dollars every week for himself and an additional $2,000 for his wife. Even in Hollywood where they speak of money as lightly as they do in Congress, that is a good salary.

"I am going to miss this place," Estelle remarked during a farewell party given for her and Jack. "I never realized how much I loved this house until now. It will be terrible to be cooped up in a New York apartment and think of this beautiful home and swimming pool waiting for us to come back."

"I would rather be back there with Jack, even during the cold weather, than to be here alone, though I don't think he would have signed for the play though if I couldn't have been in it, too. Mr. Belasco thinks it will run for at least six months—and that is much too long to be apart."

LIKE THEIR HOME The home angle is something that few people think of in connection with the Dempseys. Both having been in the public eye for so long, they are considered solely in that light — Jack as the former heavyweight champ and the greatest fighter who ever donned gloves, and Estelle as a darn good actress.

However, Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison Dempsey, private individuals, actually are home-loving people. Practically every piece of furniture in their house was personally selected by Estelle, with occasional aid from Jack. And they are proud of it.

When not working, Estelle thoroughly enjoys an occasional breakfast in bed while Jack attends to business or does a little easy road work just to keep in trim. Then both take a refreshing plunge in the swimming pool, located in the side yard. That's what they consider a perfect start for a perfect day.

We won't have anything like this in New York," they remarked regretfully, while making plans for the eastern invasion.

But $12,000 a week can't be laughed off.

WET, DRY GROUPS OUTLINE STANDS

Anti-Salooners to Support Hoover — Anti-Prohibitionists Hold Back

Washington—(AP)—An outline of the major organized efforts that are to be thrown into balance on both sides of the prohibition issue during the campaign of 1928 has been given to the Associated Press by ranking officials of the Anti-Saloon League and the Association against the Prohibition Amendment.

Speaking for the Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, its director of education, said the league was supporting Herbert Hoover and dry candidates generally the country over, regardless of party or religious affiliation. He pronounced absolutely false any statement that the organization had raised the religious issue.

Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, disclosed that a decision whether to put the association actively into the presidential campaign is awaiting a meeting of the executive committee to be held late this month, but that widespread effort would be made to secure the election of members of senate and house who oppose prohibition. "Repeal of the eighteenth amendment" was said by him to be the ultimate goal of these efforts.

Committee meets Bills were allowed by the county highway committee at a meeting Saturday morning at the courthouse. Other routine business matters were transacted.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lemke returned Sunday from a three week trip through the east. They visited the northeastern sections of Canada and returned home by way of Washington and southern cities.

Markets

PRICES CONTINUE UPWARD MOVEMENT

International Nickel and Montgomery Ward Highest in History

New York—(AP)—Stock prices moved irregularly higher at the opening of Monday's trading. Montgomery Ward opened 15 points higher at 242 duplicating its high record as established last week and Columbia Gas showed an initial gain of 2 points. Chrysler U. S. Steel and Stanley Co. of America advanced a point or more on the best sales. Allied Chemical and Midland Steel Products Preferred each fell back about a point.

Expectations of easier call money conditions this week coupled with the favorable weekend trade forecasts, stimulated the buying movement. More speculative activity was again on the upside, although the volume of trading failed to maintain the terrific pace set in last week's markets.

Montgomery Ward quickly assumed the leadership of the market by soaring 7 1/2 points to a new high record at 245. Commercial Solvents climbed 6 1/2 to 208 and was accompanied into new high ground by Magna Copper and Purity Baking at 62 1/2 and 119 1/2, respectively. Amusement shares were again in high demand on reports of dividend and earnings reports. Fox Film opened with a block of 6,000 shares at 111 1/2, up 4 points and a new high record. Keith-Albee fell back 2 1/2 points to 26 1/2 on selling presumably inspired by the institution of legal proceedings against the company by a New Jersey theatre owner. International Nickel and General Railway Sunk quickly made up the dividends which came off the stocks Monday.

Foreign exchanges opened steady with sterling cables unchanged at $45.15-16.

With prices of the best grade shares working steadily toward higher levels pools were encouraged to extend their operations into stocks whose symbol seldom appears on the tape. The consequence was that new favorites showed brief periods of animation and strength and then lapsed into obscurity again as other issues were brought forward to command attention. Some unusually large advances occurred during the morning's proceedings. International Nickel reached 130, and Montgomery Ward 250, both record figures for all time, while Republic Steel at 76 1/2 was at its best since 1922. Call loans again commanded 7 1/2 percent.

The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 3,500,000 shares.

WISCONSIN WEATHER

Mostly unsettled tonight and Tuesday; probably showers; cooler tonight except in extreme north; cooler Tuesday in south and in extreme east portion.

GENERAL WEATHER

The pressure is high over the Atlantic states, with fair weather. A low pressure of moderate intensity overlies the upper lake region and plains states, with its center over extreme western Wisconsin this morning. It is attended by showers and rather high temperatures over the central valleys and is in good position to cause further showers and thunderstorms in this section tonight and Tuesday. No strong high pressure is yet apparent following this "low" but the reaction in pressure should cause cooler weather after the center of the "low" passes here.

Industry Gets Mechanical Aptitude Test From Toy

West Lynn, Mass. —(AP)—The nursery has come to industry with a device for measuring mechanical aptitude among applicants for jobs requiring such ability.

It is nothing more or less than a block puzzle—a square of wood jigsawed into nine wiggly pieces which, after being shuffled, can be reassembled in only one way. As employed in the West Lynn works of the General Electric Company, the time required to fit the pieces together has been found to be a good indicator of innate mechanical aptitude. Among 4,000 persons who have assembled the blocks, the fastest thousand completed the task in two and three-quarter minutes or less, while the slowest thousand required more than six minutes. Many of these individuals were mature holders of responsible positions, and it is possible in the opinion of Francis L. Keane and Johnson O'Connor of the company's human engineering Laboratory, to ascertain the occupations in which the rapid block assemblers can succeed and also those in which the slow men may prosper.

Of those who finished with two and three-quarter minutes, they have found many are successful in original engineering, designing, drafting, scientific research, tool and die making, all-round machine, machine setting-up and repair, ink, or structural iron and sheet metal work. Only an occasional representative of these callings exceeded six minutes.

"All of the data which can be marshaled," the investigators assert, "indicate that the wiggly blocks measure an innate aptitude which, after the fourteenth year of a child's life, persists unchanged by education. Engineers solve the puzzle rapidly, not through acquired learning, but because all who originally exceeded six minutes in the block solution have gradually dropped the profession."

Calculating that five years wipe out from the mechanics group a large number of those who originally require more than four minutes for assembling the block, the laboratory experts advise that "the youth who exceeds this minimum should carefully avoid, in his plans for the future, thought of undertaking any occupation demanding mechanical reasoning." The same ability, however, has been shown to play no part in executive success, inspection work or any clerical occupation.

"The solution," they explain, "necessitates a peculiar type of analysis, characteristic of engineers and mechanics. The ability measured by the blocks is strictly mechanical analysis, distinct from analysis in general."

SMITH READY FOR WESTERN CAMPAIGN

By a 4,000 majority in Wyoming and topped the Davis-LaFollette vote by about 25,000 in Minnesota in 1924, he fell almost shy 25,000 shy of the combined opposition total in Montana and approximately 9,000 short in North Dakota. In Wisconsin, LaFollette rolled up a vote of more than 453,000 as against 311,000 for Coolidge and only 68,000 for Davis.

The Minnesota Coolidge's total was 420,000; LaFollette's 353,000, and Davis' 55,000; in North Dakota Coolidge got 84,000; LaFollette 89,000, and Davis 13,000; in Montana Coolidge received 74,000; LaFollette nearly 65,000, and Davis about 34,000, while Wyoming gave Coolidge 41,000; LaFollette 25,000, and Davis only 12,000.

In every state Governor Smith enters after he leaves Denver and until he gets back in Illinois on his return to New York, a United States senator is up for reelection.

Senator Frazier, who is classed as one of the Republican Independents, and who has announced for Hoover, again is making the race in North Dakota. In Minnesota, Shipstead, the only Farmer-Laborite in the senate, is up for reelection and in Wisconsin, Young "Bob" LaFollette is the Republican senatorial nominee.

Neither LaFollette nor Shipstead has expressed himself openly as to which presidential candidate he will support.
